

Teresa Long, MD, MPH, is a nationally recognized public health leader, physician, and educator with four decades of experience in public health leadership. She served for 15 years as Health Commissioner for Columbus Public Health, after 17 years as Medical Director and Assistant Health Commissioner. Upon retiring she served as Special Advisor for Community Engagement and Partnerships and Clinical Associate Professor at The Ohio State University College of Public Health. Now actively retired, she serves as an Adjunct Professor at OSU, on multiple charitable boards and walks a lot. Dr. Long has dedicated her career to advancing health equity, building cross-sector partnerships, and strengthening public health systems through leadership, education, and community engagement. She was recently appointed to a local Board of Health.